Church, School Join for Annual Holiday Programs

Christmas activities at the Bethesda Assembly of God Church and the Gardena Christian School will begin tomorrow evening with the presentation of the school's annual program.

The program, scheduled at 7:30 p.m., will be part of the regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Fellowship.

The Bethesda Church choir will present its annual Christmas cantata, "Born A King" by John Peterson, at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The church and school "Singing Christmas Tree" service also has been scheduled. The tree, which can hold about 60 persons, is located in the parking lot adjacent to the church.

Bethesda Assembly of God Church is located at 1473 W. 182nd St.

Hahn Seeks to Extend New 'No Hiring' Rule

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn has bluntly informed 10 county department heads under his direct supervision that he will not recommend to the Board of Supervisors any new positions or filling of current vacancies in their departments.

In an hour-and-a-half conference with the department heads, Hahn stressed that realistic measures for efficiency and economy must be implemented at every level of government to ease property taxes.

"The property owners are overburdened with taxes and the way to reduce taxes is to reduce personnel," Hahn said.

HE EARLIER had presented to the Board of Supervisors a list showing that 2,381 positions are currently vacant in all county departments and on his motion the board instructed every department head to completely review their operations before asking to fill these positions.

Hahn pointed out that if the operation of the county can continue without filling these jobs it would represent a taxpayers' saving of $1,528,000 per month — $18,335,200 annually.

The Supervisor then called his own department heads in and informed them of his firm policy against hiring any new employees.

ALTHOUGH each department head present gave reasons why they should have more personnel, Hahn insisted they review their overall needs and operation.

"Each department head has the responsibility to conduct county operations as economically as possible and demand strict efficiency," he said.

Department heads who met with Hahn were Auditor-Controller Roscoe Hollinger, Building Services Superintendent Robert Hardon County Clerk Bill Sharp, County Counsel Harold W. Kennedy, Marshal Leslie Keays, Mechanical Department Director Robert O. Sudduth, Director of Military and Veterans Affairs Norman Kelly, Natural History Museum Director Herbert Friedmann, Public Defender Erling Hovden, and Recorder Ray Lee.

Kanine Korner

By Francis X. Lohmann

Motorcycling these days seems to have gone to the dogs. Bob and Jean Downing of Cheyenne, Wyo., avid cyclists and dog lovers will attest to it. The Downings own one of the most traveled dogs on motorcycles that it. Their six-year-old Terrier, Irving, has covered about 30,000 miles sitting on the gas tank of a motorcycle directly in front of the driver.

According to the news story reaching my desk, Irving first got on a motorcycle when he was only six weeks old. Since that time the dog has been the constant companion of the Downings wherever they go.

Irving is a natural canine cyclist. He anticipates the turns and leans into them. On short trips, he just perches himself on the gas tank and somehow manages to balance himself. On longer trips he sits in a basket specially made for motorcycles. Irving has fallen off the two-wheeler several times but fortunately was never seriously hurt.

TALES FROM dogdom: No major dog shows scheduled for the remainder of 1966. Kennel Club of Beverly Hills ushers in the '67 season with the big unbenched All Breed Dog Show set for Sunday, Jan. 8. . . Gwen Bari's spectacular Whispering Waters Hotel in Rancho Mirage is fast becoming a mecca for vacationing dog lovers. Just a few bars from Palm Springs, this fine hostelry caters and welcomes dogs with well behaved masters. Co-owner Gwen Bari is the pulse-quickening pianist-singer and just like most of us, an avid dog lover. . . How does this grab you? Credits cards for pets. No kidding! A San Diego company is coming up with a revolving charge card enabling dog and cat owners to obtain a variety of pet services and supplies on the proverbial cuff. Cardholders will be able to charge veterinary aid, including hospitalization; pet grooming, training, foods, accessories, boarding and kennel services or even the purchase of dogs and cats. How about that? . . . Dog clubs would do well to send for the booklet—"Your Dog Show and the Press"—published by Gaines Dog Research Center in conjunction with the Dog Writers' Association of America. Designed to aid organizations in obtaining maximum publicity for their dog shows and it's free. Address Gaines Press Booklet, P. O. Box 1007, Kankakee, Ill. . . My good friend Mayor Sam Yorty is an avid Dalmatian fancier. His Dali, Jet, is master of the Yorty household. . . Lee Marvin favors the Pulli. . . And Wendell Corey goes for the Akita breed of dog.

BREED OF THE WEEK — Alaskan Malamute . . . The Alaskan Malamute is to a certain degree, a breed without a history, for the people who have bred and used him for a lead dog for untold generations are a tribal group without documented records and whose origins are unknown. The name of the breed comes from the name of an arctic tribe, the Malamutes, who lives in the northwestern regions of Alaska. Early explorers and travelers referred to the Malamutes as a superior band of natives, displaying marked ability in making fine sleds and breeding fine sled dogs of exceptional strength and beauty.

The Malamute's conformation indicates his close relationship with the other three arctic breeds — the Siberian Husky, the Eskimo, and the Samoyed. Two Admiral Byrd expeditions to the South Pole have used Malamutes and with great success.

The Malamutes' shining hour came in 1935 when the American Kennel Club accepted them as a distinct breed of dog. The Alaskan Malamute tips the scales at about 75 pounds and in height 24 inches.
